Training Overview

This Advanced EMDR Specialty Training in early EMDR intervention presents a protocol designed to help stabilize clients in the face of traumatic stress and to process the trauma before it continues to exist and strengthen as a maladaptive memory. Through lectures, videos, and supervised practice in small groups, you'll learn to integrate this evidence-based protocol into your clinical practice and make a positive difference for people who've experienced recent trauma wherever it occurs.

Preparing for Your Training Experience

This online training consists of lecture, discussion, and review of client video segments, giving you ample opportunity to ask questions in this live, online format. It is recommended that you prepare a private space from which to participate that is free from distractions for everyone's benefit, and that you have a good internet connection with a backup plan.

Early Interventions Restore Safety, Strengthen Resilience and Reduce the Likelihood of PTSD

With so many people in the world experiencing natural and human-made disasters; community devastation and interpersonal violence, there is a critical need for early EMDR intervention following traumatic incidents. In 2008, EMDR R-TEP (Recent Traumatic Events Protocol) was developed by Elan Shapiro and Brurit Laub to meet that need. This protocol is now used in disaster areas around the world, for ongoing traumatic stress and for recent traumatic events large and small.

R-TEP is Not Only for Headline-Level Disasters

It is a powerful addition to every EMDR therapists' repertoire. R-TEP is specifically designed to meet the unique needs arising from recent traumatic events—which differ from those for processing past traumas. R-TEP expands your ability to respond to clients blindsided by a recent trauma or caught in an overwhelming event as it unfolds in real time. Using R-TEP, you can provide safety and containment to a client who may not be ready for memory processing. It lets you titrate the client's experience without the risk of further destabilization. You can help clients respond adaptively to their difficult situation, especially those that can be ongoing. And with R-TEP you have a clinical roadmap for helping them move through recent traumatic events based on their capacities and circumstances.

Eligibility

This training is for mental health professionals who have completed the EMDR Basic Training, are licensed for independent practice, or on a licensing track under supervision. It is recommended that you have at least six months of practice experience using EMDR with your clients in order to fully benefit from this course.
